We worked closely with clubs including Manchester United, Liverpool, PSG and Real Madrid to bring you a high-intensity game experience. The work involved scientists analysing hundreds of hours of data from these players during training sessions, matches and matches played in-season. By piecing together this information, we were able to recreate a simulation of a highly-intense football match based on real-life scenarios. For the first time, this type of information is available to FIFA players, using a new player broadcast system. FIFA 22 introduces "Visible Ball Trajectory," which highlights the path of the ball throughout the match. The ball trajectory can be selected so that it can now be viewed from all camera angles, and is useful for strategy analysis of player movement. Players on the pitch can also hold the right stick down while dribbling, which enables you to control the player's behaviour. This creates a dynamic gameplay experience with opponents and teammates on the pitch, as well as an improved artificial intelligence. Levels FIFA 22 introduces a host of new customisable AI levels to FIFA Ultimate Team, expanding the number of objectives in FIFA Ultimate Team Seasons from three to 13. These goals include territory, player attributes, goals, player infamy and more, including goals that require psychological elements. These objectives can be increased to an unlimited amount, and can be randomly generated or manually set. All objectives can be customised in terms of difficulty and release date. A new "Player Radar" system can be used to view how players are gaining success and failure points in a wider context. Match day When registering for a game of FIFA Ultimate Team, you are presented with a "Matchday" event that you can set the date, time and opponent for. Pre-match Winning a game of FIFA Ultimate Team will allow you to access the FIFA mobile "Pre-Match" mode, where you can select and customise the setup and review of your football team. This includes staff, location, stadium, kit, contract and all team and squad details. Following on from this, the mode provides a briefing of the game ahead, with a number of options including commentary, camera angles, pitch analysis, score prediction and a chat system. When using Commentary, you can view the broadcast on the big screen,
